A Message from the Chancellor

As Chancellor of Charles Darwin University it is an honour and a privilege to congratulate the graduands of 2010.

Based on 50 years of education tradition, Charles Darwin University was formed through the merger of the Northern Territory University, Centralian College, the Northern Territory Rural College and the Menzies School of Health Research. This state of the art institution has grown into a place of learning for an increasing number of Territorians and people from across our nation and the world.

Charles Darwin University offers a fresh approach to education, with a wide range of study options, excellent standards of teaching and an engaging learning environment. This is a university that aims to inspire its students to acquire the skills and knowledge to change their world for their own good and the good of the community.

As well as being a celebration of knowledge, graduation ceremonies allow students to share their pride and satisfaction in achieving their goals with their family, friends, and the University staff who have supported and encouraged them throughout their studies.

Graduation should not be a farewell to Charles Darwin University. We look forward to welcoming back graduates as members of the Alumni or through continuing formal studies and to the many symposia, lectures, concerts and events held at the University each year.

Congratulations again to the graduates of 2010. We have no doubt we will be hearing of your achievements in your work and the community in the future.

Hon. Sally Thomas AM
Chancellor

A Message from the Vice-Chancellor

This is a very important evening in your life as you graduate from Charles Darwin University. You will have grown in knowledge and understanding during your time as a student at the University and, by making the most of your university experiences will make a difference not only to your own future and that of your family but importantly to the Northern Territory and the community in which you live and work.

You are part of a dynamic and rapidly changing world particularly in the generation of new knowledge and innovative approaches to solving complex globally relevant problems – ongoing change is quite simply part of life. Change also provides opportunities and challenges that I hope you will embrace and as a result make a real contribution to the adaptive and evolving society that we live in. Remember Charles Darwin, the namesake of our University once said, “It is not the strongest of the species that survive, not the most intelligent, but the one most responsive to change.”

We live in an age where information on any subject is growing at an ever-increasing rate and technology is rapidly changing the way we live, work and enjoy ourselves. To respond to this changing environment, and to be a successful contributor to it, you must continue to learn and to strive to apply what you have learned to the challenges you face. I hope your time at Charles Darwin University has given you a thirst for life long learning and that you will be open to new ideas, and to doing things differently and for the better in the years ahead.

As a graduate of Charles Darwin University, you join the alumni of a university that provides vibrant learning, life-changing experiences and graduating individuals with the ability to be excellent thinkers, workers and members of society: a university that equips its graduates with the generic skills to thrive in a complex world.

I hope you have enjoyed your university experience and that you will continue to learn and, through your words and actions, contribute to the development and reputation of Charles Darwin University, a university that aspires to work with its alumni, wherever they may be, to provide an enriching experience.

This evening is one of celebration; you have achieved a significant milestone and we are proud of you. We join with your family and friends in saying “congratulations” and best wishes for a bright and rewarding future.

Professor Barney Glover
Vice-Chancellor

Thesis title: Effects of exotic pasture grasses on biodiversity in the Mary River Catchment, Northern Territory.

The Mary River catchment, NT, is a multiple-use region which has significance as highly productive pastoral land, but also for conservation values. My research involved comprehensive field surveys of terrestrial vertebrate fauna in the floodplain and savanna woodland habitats within the catchment, and provided the first quantitative evidence on the ecological effects of two invasive exotic pasture species (para grass and gamba grass). The key finding of my work was that the conversion of native vegetation to communities dominated by dense para grass or gamba grass, is likely to lead to a substantial loss of plant and animal biodiversity (particularly small reptiles and birds). In order to realise conservation goals for the region, the eradication of para grass and gamba grass on conservation reserves, and improved control of these exotic pastures on neighbouring land, must become a high priority for land managers within the Mary River catchment.

Thesis title: Defined by Contradiction: The Social Construction of Joint Management in Kakadu National Park

Kakadu has come to be regarded as one of the best examples of a national park where management is shared between the state and the Indigenous people who 'own' the land. This now-idealised model of joint management comprises vesting the land in the traditional Aboriginal owners, leasing it back to the state, an active board of management with an Aboriginal majority, and regular consultation between the partners – traditional owners and white officials. I show that, whilst these conditions are technically met, contradictory forces at many levels constantly threaten their actual fulfilment – and that most members of both partner groups find the experience of joint management deeply disturbing and failing to meet their expectations. I also show that simple social structures and activities already in place could be effectively boosted to relieve some of the tensions that have developed over the three decades of the park's life.

Thesis title: Kunmanggur, Legend and Leadership: a study of Indigenous leadership and succession focussing on the northwest region of the Northern Territory of Australia

This thesis explores how Indigenous leadership in Australia is constructed and maintained by undertaking a case study of the Port Keats region, the people and its history. The thesis investigates how Indigenous people have recast their leadership forms in order to perceive, interpret and relate to contemporary political, social and economic issues. It examines and describes the way in which community members interact with mainstream society and most importantly, get things done, often under extremely difficult circumstances. Detailed individual and group accounts of lives and events, which occurred in areas such as the pastoral industry, augment and enhance the analysis. The adjustments made by Indigenous people to changes in their lives since first contact have been acted out in various forms, including resistance and hostility, but in most cases have occurred through constructive engagement. The research indicates ongoing opportunities to further understand, interact and work positively with Indigenous community leaders.

Thesis title: Nutrient Status in a Polluted, Tropical, Macrotidal Environment- Buffalo Creek, Northern Territory, Australia

Buffalo Creek, Darwin, Northern Territory, was studied to determine the key factors influencing nutrient cycling in wet dry tropical systems subject to large tidal inundations and high nutrient loads from a sewage treatment plant. Key processes were investigated by studying nutrients in situ under a range of tidal and seasonal conditions, exploring the interactions between the water column, sediment and porewater, determining nutrient release rates after exposing sediments to intense mixing (representative of tidal and seasonal flooding) and establishing a chronology of nutrients in sediment using dating techniques. This study revealed that in these wet dry tropical, macrotidal systems it is often physical processes (such as mixing from tide and seasonal flooding) that play a central role in nutrient status rather than biological processes which dominate in temperate and subtropical estuaries. The study found that although nutrient levels in the water column often exceeded environmental limits, in general nutrient levels in the sediment were typical of unimpacted mangrove sediments.

Thesis title: Development of the Greater Sunrise Gas Field in the Timor Sea

The focus of this research is the Greater Sunrise gas-condensate field located in the Timor Sea, a valuable natural resource that remains untapped due to various political, economic and legal challenges. The research aims to identify the most salient of these issues to inform policy, where possible, to expedite future development of Australia's hydrocarbon endowment. The research utilises an actors (stakeholder) and factors framework to assess the influence of these various issues. The dynamic and complex nature of the project environment is highlighted, along with the imperative for legal and fiscal certainty as a prerequisite for commercial development. The paramount role of politics within the politics-economics nexus is also identified, and a collaborative government-industry approach to policy development is recommended. In increasing understanding about the hydrocarbon project environment this thesis enhances the opportunity to realise future nationally beneficial environmental, social, and economic outcomes.

Thesis title: The Commonwealth Government and the Northern Territory Pastoral Industry, 1911 – 1978

The thesis concerns the Commonwealth Government's administration of the Northern Territory's pastoral industry from 1911 to 1978. It argues that corporate pastoralists occupied vast tracts of land, too large to be effectively managed. They resisted all attempts by the Commonwealth to resume their land, and blamed the Commonwealth for the losses they sustained, losses which were often caused by their own actions. Smaller, family pastoralists likewise blamed the Commonwealth for their misfortunes; refused to acknowledge their own contribution to those misfortunes; and relied on the Commonwealth for financial support to the extent that it became a substitute for good management. The thesis is essentially a defence of the Commonwealth. It does not absolve the Commonwealth from blame, as mistakes were made during the industry's administration; however, it is argued that failures were as much the fault of pastoralists and their representative associations.

Thesis title: ECG and APG Signal Analysis during Exercise in a Hot Environment

The aim of this research is to examine the effect of heat stress on selected biological signals: the electrocardiogram (ECG) and the acceleration plethysmogram (APG).

ECG and APG data were collected during a heat stress test which was carried out in a hot and humid environment.

One of the findings is that the heart rate continued to increase, although the exercise intensity and the environment remained the same.

The APG showed clear shape changes during heat stress, which were different from the abnormal APG shapes associated with illnesses. This indicates that the effect of heat stress is different from the abnormalities due to the illnesses. The changes were found to correlate with the heart rate and body core temperature.

Although the research was still at a preliminary stage, the biological signals mentioned above have shown potential to be the indicators for analysing the heat stress effect on the body.

Thesis title: The Journey of the Goddess Durga: India, Java and Bali

This thesis examines the demonization of images of the goddess Durga in Indonesia, viewed first as a long-term historical process that appears to have begun in East Java sometime during the first half of the second millennium CE. An attempt is then made to show how this long-term process reflected largely in mythology may be related to the demonization of images of women of the Indonesian Women's Movement (Gerwani) during the transition from the Old Order of President Soekarno (1945-1966) to the establishment of the New Order by Indonesia's second president, Suharto (1966-1998). In this view, images of Durga and the women of Gerwani have shared a similar fate, moving from a state of being considered attractive and beneficial, but later being understood as terrifying, demonic figures feared by the community.

Thesis title: Contact Zones: Sport and Race in The Northern Territory, 1869–1953

Sport and sports fields the world over are hotly contested social and political terrain. Contact Zones set out to explore the history of sport and race in the Northern Territory to understand how and why it was, and remains, an active and powerful social agent and an important barometer of changing values. The study drew upon and analysed diverse sources, challenging the conventional White history, challenging myths, interrogating the social memory, and highlighting dialectical contradictions. Contact Zones concludes that the obstacles of poverty, oppression, bigotry and discrimination that confronted non-White participation in sport throughout Australia were not different in the Northern Territory but that the social, political and physical environment meant that they were more extreme and prolonged. At the heart of this history from sporting exclusion and segregation to integration and liberation for the Territory's non-White sportsmen and women is the struggle for human rights and recognition

Kayli Janine Wild

Thesis title: Maternity waiting homes and the shaping of maternal health policy in Timor-Leste

This research used maternity waiting homes as a case study to examine the factors that influenced the development of maternal health policy and use of maternity services in Timor-Leste. Drawing on the anthropology of policy, 124 interviews were conducted with policy-makers, health workers, women and families in 2006-2007. An analysis of the policy process revealed complex power relationships favoured the role of national elites when setting the policy agenda. Despite strong national leadership, maternity waiting homes were transformed during implementation indicating 'street level bureaucrats' such as health managers and midwives had more control over implementation than expected. An alternative model of policy is presented, one which frames implementation as a process of adaptation. This model illustrates the importance of considering women's needs and health system capacity when developing interventions. It advocates for the participation of street level bureaucrats and rural women in setting a rural health policy agenda.

Thesis title: ETHNO-ECO DIALOGUE: Filmmaking for Environmental Sustainability

This visual arts research project explores how different styles of documentary film can extend dialogue about our identity in natural places. It also examines how this identity links to actions for environmental sustainability, considering diverse cultural views. Interviews, visually interpreted surveys, documented events and short films from filmmaking workshops with international and local participants, provided the content for two main films. The first film, 'There we Were, Here we Are', is bilingual in English and Latvian and explores cultural and generational shifts in affinity to natural places. The second film, 'Sharing Vision' depicts many actions people have taken to promote environmental sustainability in Darwin from 2008-2009. The written exegesis provides an explanation of theory and methods used in research alongside a discussion of the way films can be used to promote actions on a local and global level.

Alumni Welcome

Congratulations on the completion of your award from Charles Darwin University. I hope you will never forget your time with us and I encourage you to stay in touch with us as you continue through your life journey.

I wish you every success in your future endeavours and encourage you to contribute to the Alumni web site and University publications. We would be delighted if you would share your experiences of the University, future career achievements and personal triumphs.

Charles Darwin University Alumni has been set up to support and promote the interests of our graduates, and to foster an environment where members can contribute to the future of the University. The Alumni also provides a professional and social connection for all people who have contributed to Charles Darwin University.

Alumni membership is free. Alumni registration can be done online through the Alumni website at www.cdu.edu.au/alumni

On behalf of the Alumni and the University, I welcome you into the Alumni family and I look forward to continuing our relationship with you.

Yours sincerely

Australian Federation of University Women Inc Northern Territory

The Australian Federation of University Women (Northern Territory) Inc (AFUW-NT) provided assistance in gowning for the Graduation ceremony this evening.

This is a fund-raising activity providing scholarships for Northern Territory, and now East Timorese, women students. We offer three $1000 scholarships annually in the Northern Territory – one each to an undergraduate, a postgraduate and one identified for an Indigenous woman student. Three scholarships are offered to women studying at the Universidade Nacional Timor Leste, Dili. For images of presentation ceremonies in Darwin and Dili, please visit the website listed below.

The AFUW NT Scholarships are offered in association with the CDU Foundation.

AFUW-NT is a member of the Federal Council of the Australian Federation of Graduate Women Inc (AFGW Inc). AFGW Inc joined the International Federation of University Women (IFUW) in 1924. IFUW has NGO status with the United Nations, and is a voice for graduate women, promoting the advancement of women worldwide and their equal opportunity through initiatives in education, welfare, friendship, the environment and peace.

Membership in AFGW Inc is open to all women who hold an undergraduate degree or its equivalent from a University anywhere in the world. Employment in a University or any other location is not a requirement.

AFGW Inc administers some $400,000 in scholarship funds nationally, and has Standing Committees on education, youth, international issues, the environment and peace. AFGW Inc is a member of the Women's Alliances established by the Federal Government to advise on women's perspectives on rural, economic, human rights and health issues.

If you would like to know more about AFUW-NT, visit these websites:
